

Abstract

Startup/driving authorization system for a vehicle in which a control unit in the vehicle uses an interrogation/response dialog with a portable transponder to check and approve or deny authorization to start up and drive the vehicle by exchanging identification codes. This authorization includes semiautomatic or fully automatic startup of the vehicle engine, provided that such authorization is made dependent on additional preset switching and/or operating states of monitored vehicle components.